

Compassion as a Catalyst for Systems
Change

EOI - For professionals

You are invited to express your interest
in joining a co-creation team to build strong and respectful culture at the Women's and Children's Services at Metro South

Love in Action

Compassion Revolution

Compassionate care becomes an organisational norm only when health leaders create and nurture a “culture of compassion” that actively supports, develops, and recognises the role of compassion in day-to-day management and practice; models of care, design of infrastructure and patient involvement in service planning and delivery.

We warmly invite you to join us.

Compassion Revolution is working with the Women's and Children's Services (W&CS) to improve culture and care.

This co-creation team is invited to bring their lived experience, professional experience and creativity to design, test and implement new ways of working and being.

Co-creation is creative, explorative, experimental and truly rewarding. Done well it can make a world of difference to people and place, both here at the W&CS but also potentially by others working in and living-in healthcare scenarios like this, and may even contribute to social and systems change.

Why we're coming together

Compassion Revolution has been invited to improve culture and service delivery at the Women's and Children Services at Metro South Health. We're gathering a co-creation team of 15-20 or so people; some with lived-experience of pregnancy and/or birthing at this service, and others are the people who care for them. You will be on this team.

It is our goal to help build good inter-team collaboration and to work supportively across organisational boundaries. Our focus will be on helping us work towards a shared vision and then activate this vision. Good intentions are not enough.

Every person on this team will imagine what good culture looks like—for themselves and then as a collective. Our diversity will build our strength.

We've spent time in previous weeks with the people in and around the Women's and Children's Services, and have met an open and eager community. We are very glad to be working on this project with you.

Good culture feels like we're in good hands. Let's begin.

About the role of a co-creator

As a team member and with our support, you can expect to:

Hear

Other people's experiences and ideas, which may be different to yours.

Existing research and insights.

What's in and out of the scope of this project.

Availability

We estimate that your involvement will be about 4 hours every month for 6 months.

Share

Your perspective—to build a better understanding of the challenges and fill the gaps.

Your priorities—what you think is most important to include and change.

Your experience—if and when you'd like to.

Your feedback—to help us improve as we go.

Do

Take breaks as you need to.

Value other perspectives.

Use your curiosity—learning, not only confirming what you already know or think.

Learn by doing—talking is good; doing is even better. We evolve and share our ideas by building and testing them.

Ask clarifying questions that others may be too afraid to ask to help build a shared understanding.

You will be an active participant alongside others; listening, learning and sharing your perspectives.

What you don't need to do...

You don't need to always agree with others in the group; we encourage discussion.

You don't need to ask people on the co-design team about their lived experience or professional background or disclose your own, unless you'd like to in a way that doesn't re-traumatise others or yourself.

You don't need to present in front of the group.

Our workshops will be relaxed and informal. Here's what you need to know:

- There is no need to prepare anything before our workshop.
- You don't need to disclose anything. You won't be asked to introduce yourself by your personal or professional status or your story—just your name and pronouns. You can choose to accept or decline any prompts to participate.
- We'll take breaks when we meet in person and online.
- You won't be asked to review long documents outside the sessions.

Submit your Expression of Interest

To help us develop a balanced and varied team of Co-creators where there is representation across the whole service we ask that you respond to these questions:

1. What are you hoping to learn, develop or grow through your membership on this co-creation team?
2. What will you endeavour to contribute to this process?

Send your EOI to wcserviceimprovementteam@health.qld.gov.au

closing date: 14th September 4pm

Contact us

Call: +61 438 845 200 Email:
hello@compassionrevolution

compassionrevolution.care

Compassion
Revolution